

WEEK 5 OF 4 · Mind

Script 5: The Inner Replay (Visualization)Theme: Mental Rehearsal

Rationale: Elite athletes use visualization to train the nervous system without moving a muscle. The mind cannot tell the difference between a vivid memory and real life. This script helps students refine technique by using the mind to correct the body.

Request students to sit or lie down comfortably.

"The mind cannot tell the difference between a vivid memory and real life. We can train without moving. Close your eyes.

I want you to pick one technique or kata you are struggling with. See yourself standing on the mat. See yourself executing that technique perfectly. Watch it in slow motion. See the foot placement. See the angle of the hand. Feel the snap of the uniform.

Now, step into that body. Feel yourself doing it. If you see a mistake in your mind, rewind the tape and fix it. Do it again perfectly. Do this three times in your own mind. (Pause for 30 seconds.)

You have just laid the blueprint for your body to follow."

(For a reset before an intense class:) "Wiggle your fingers and toes. Take a deep breath and clap your hands once together. Open your eyes."
