

Curriculum Application & Student Challenges

How to Use This Module in Class

Use this module during continuous sparring or endurance drills where students must rely on intuition rather than conscious planning. This is the "flow state" where everything around the student disappears and only the current goal matters.

Student Challenges — Integrate into Training:

- During "freestyle" or creative forms practice — notice if you enter a state of flow.
- During continuous sparring rounds — try to move from the "quiet center," not from panic.
- When performing a technique you know very well — let your body take over without conscious planning.

Reflective Questions — Ask After Training:

- Did you feel a moment today where you weren't "trying" but simply "doing"?
- Flow allows you to move beyond hesitation or self-judgment. Did you hesitate today? If so, what stopped you?
- How does it feel emotionally when you are in sync with your movement?
- Connect to your "Why." Why did you step onto the mats today? How does that purpose change your energy during the hard parts of class?

MINDFULNESS ON THE MATS

Module Summary: SPIRIT

Finding Your Flow: Reliving a past moment of peak performance to anchor the session.

The Warrior's Why: Visualizing one's motivation as an internal flame of purpose.

The River: Visualizing energy as water to practice adapting without hesitation.

The Inner Bow: Cultivating self-compassion to reduce judgment and frustration.

The Eye of the Storm: Finding a still, calm center (equanimity) regardless of external chaos.
